

Citizenship

Citizenship entails an understanding of one’s membership in a variety of “groups,” from the campus community to the global level, and a demonstrated commitment through behaviors that reflect active participation within those groups. Knowledge of the various rights, privileges and associated duties of citizenship are things in which students should be actively engaged; whether those are of a political, social, or legal nature.